Global Goal 13, Climate Action

The United Nations Organisation consists of 193 member countries. It makes important decisions about international problems. One of these is how to work together to combat climate change.

Today the average global temperature is about 1 degree centigrade more than in the 19th century.

The consequences of climate change are becoming more and more serious: unstable climate, floods, drought and fires, diminishing polar ice, increasing sea levels and temperatures.

We now know that the main cause of climate change is greenhouse gas emissions caused by human activity.

In 2015, 195 countries signed The Paris Agreement on climate change. The agreement wants to introduce "clean" energy into industry and primary sector activities.

So what can you do to combat climate change?

Don't heat or cool your house too much.

Turn off lights when you aren't using them, and use energy-saving light bulbs.

Recycle your rubbish.

Use transport with low environmental impact.

Global Goal 4: Quality education

The United Nations recently took an important decision: to provide quality education for all the children in the world by 2030.

Did you know that 103 million young people in the world cannot read or write, and more than 60% of these people are women?

The role of education is fundamental for the development of a society. Education gives people the knowledge necessary to make a positive difference to society, and is vital for the growth and development of a community.

There are still 57 million children, mostly in Africa, who do not go to primary school. Many schools are insufficient and inadequate. 50% of the children in war zones do not go to school.

This goal of the United Nations requires developed countries to give more funding to education and to guarantee universal education. This means eliminating the barriers which prevent access to education to people who live in poverty or who are disabled.

The action of governments and international organisations, which can offer support and contributions for educational projects, is fundamental to reach this goal.

What can you do?

Take full advantage of every opportunity your school offers you. Respect your school building and property. Help your schoolmates when they have problems.
