School life for a 13-year-old British boy

Hello, my name's Daniel. I am in Year 8 of Secondary School.

My school is a Technology College and specialises in computers and Maths. I leave home at eight o'clock and take the bus to school. When I arrive at school, I go to my Tutor Room for Registration at half past eight. Our first period starts at ten to nine. Every period is of 50 minutes. Every day I start with a different lesson: English on Mondays, Maths on Tuesdays, French on Wednesdays, Science on Thursdays and ICT on Fridays. I study other subjects: History and Geography, Art, Music, Religion and Physical Education. All my lessons are in different, nice, large classrooms. There are usually twenty students in a classroom. I have a locker where I put my stuff. I only have my books and my computer with me. I have 10 teachers. I like my English teacher; she isn't very strict. At half past one I have lunch in the school canteen. School finishes at ten past three.

I sometimes stay there after school for Drama and Judo Clubs.

locker = armadietto
stuff = roba
strict = severo

School life for a 12-year-old African girl

Hi, my name's Marguerite. I am a student at a Secondary School in Foumban, Cameroon. I live in the suburbs of Foumbam, two kilometres from the school. I am from a polygamic family. My father is married to four women and he has got thirty children. Our house has got ten rooms: one for my father, four for our mothers and five for the children. I leave home at half past six. I walk to school every day. I study English, French, German as my optional subject, Maths, History, Science, Geography, Citizenship, PE, Art and Crafts and Manual work. We haven't got books or computers; we have our exercise books for our homework. The teachers use a blackboard and chalk. I haven't got many teachers, only four. I like my Maths, Science and Geography teacher. I think he is nice and fun. My Year 7 class has forty students. At one o'clock I have my packed lunch with my classmates. School finishes at half past three. After school there are clubs for Choir, Theatre, Dance and English. My favourite is the Dance Club and we organise a dance evening for the end of the school year.

citizenship = educazione alla cittadinanza crafts = attività pratiche packed lunch = pranzo al sacco classmates = compagni di classe
